THE Chinese Authorities at Foothow show an amount of indifference to wrongs perpe trated on British and foreign subjects which is at once surprising and amoying. They been turned out at the North China Herald | received into the Gaol on the 10th instant, and are making no effort to bring the murderers of Mr. Blacklock to justice, although well aware that he fell while in the execution of his duty in protecting the Chinese Customs revenue. It was the same with regard to the different attacks and robberies made on the Telegraph. Everything is quietly ignored. The last outrage, committed by natives, namely, that on Mr. Boxsen, a gentleman in the service of the Great Northern Telegraph Company, will in all probability also be passed over without any satisfaction or compensation being obtained. It will be sion and sold it, he was fined $3; in default, 14 remembered that Mr. Boysen, while engaged in taking delivery of some property belonging to the Great Northern Telegraph Company, which had been stolen from them and recovered, at a village called Hungkow, some 30 miles from Foothow, was seized, soner's second wife not as we wrongly stated robbed of all the money in his possession, and detained for some time in a Chinese house because he would- not entertain a preposterous claim for $70 advanced by the man in whose building the telegraph material had been deposited. The Foochow Herald says that it has ascertained that the ringleader in the attack and robbery has been identified but that the native officials decline either to arrest him or obtain restitution of the stolen money. But, as we said knowingly passed off the spurious cash, he would before, there is too much reason to believe Mr. Russell committed the prisoner for trial, that they prefer to slur over these outrages on foreigners. It saves trouble and inconvenience, and it incenses the foreigner. And whilst there is no apparent danger to be apprehended from this course, they rather enjoy seeing the foreigner chafe at the repeated delays to which he is subjected. They fail. of course, to see that they compromise their own dignity by taking this line of action. That it does so in the eyes of foreigners we been somewhat too hot for comfort. The thormometer marked 92 degrees in the shade on three days last week at the Harbour Master's office. Old inhabitants are very generally complaining that they have not felt the heat so intense for many years, and all are agreed that a change is desirable. The comparative absence of breeze makes the heat more apparent and less supportable, and its long continuance tends to enervate the frame and make it appear more trying. But if there is any consolation in knowing that residents in the north are suffering from the same cause it is to be had in abundance. At Shanghai they have had the glass up to 100 degrees Fahronheit; at Hankow it reached 106 degrees on the afternoon of the 4th instant; at Tientsin-it is reported to have recently ranged from 09 deg. to 105 Flynn on deck and be went. The prosecutor said at 2 p.m. on Saturday lie went on board and his attention was directed to the lingingers having an alternation with the first prisoner Flynn, forward, opposite the engine room. He asked what was the motter and was informed that Flynn had called the engineer a pup and had oballenged him to go down below. The second engineer ordered be quiet and not make a noise and to return to their work. The first prisoner, Flynn, then said that Saturday afternoon was not the time for him to be working, and be positively refused to a below or obey either his orders of those of the engineers. He then ordered him to stand on one side until he sent to the police bulk for assistance, but this he also refused to do and demanded his discharge. Blake then came aft and used insolent and abusive, language and and Blake were taken away. Macey came alt evidently under the influence of liquor, and

Unfortunately it is not so. I a most disappointing monotony. They are all mero records of votive offerings, and in the that the only variations they present are in the ler, £200, as a tribute of respect to the numes of the gods to whom the offeringe are made, and the names of the persons by whom they are presented. Indeed, the formula is so constant that in numerous instances the it appears to have been written beforehand on the stone, a blank space being left for the name of the donor. Still with all their monotonous uniformity the inscriptions are not devoid of valuable information. To begin with. there is a very remarkable difference between the characters in which the inscriptions are written. In one set the letters are genuine Phonician, in another they are ounsiderably modified. Following M. Renan, M. Berger infere that the archaio Phonician characters were used by the Carthaginians proper, the descendants of the original colonists from Tyre. while the neo-Punic were employed by the indigenous population. The evidence upon which this theory rests is threefold. Firetly, the neo-Punic characters are unquestionably formed from the archaic: they differ from the latter, in fact, only in having almost lost their tops, whereas their tails are greatly exacgerated. Secondly, the two alphabets were demonstrably used simultaneously, they being found occasionally even in the same inscription. At the Bow Street police court Thomas Har- | And, lastly, the archaic obstacter vastly prerington, about twenty-nine, was charged with ponderates in the ruins of the seascoast cities, attempting to pick the pockets of a gentleman | while the non-Punic is equally in the ascendant named Edward Mason an engineer of Pimlico. in the interior. "Silence!" cried his Honor. "That's her," continued the prisoner. Ive heard that old hea-bawk screem of er's eyery day for soven years, and I'm "Can't you agree?

I've tried to, judge. I've bought her riugs and breast-pins; I've brought her home icc- o cream and lottery tickets; she's had buttonboots, a hat that turns up in front, and now, i of a fashionable bustle!" "Lew Hull, I—!" "Be calm!" shouted Bligh.

"And now," continued Hull, "send me up—boost me for six months! If I don't go | G to the House of Correction I'll go to the G bottom of the river!" "I'll doit, Mr. Hull; I'll make it six months, and if she comes up there and bothers you, I'll have her sawed in two!" "This is vawl!" announced Bijah, and the prisoners' band escorted Mrs. Hull to the corner, singing: Mat-ri-mony's but a struggle, First von haul, and then you pull, Alors! clars! the world is fall of Cases just like this of Hull. Store clothes.

A NEW MUSICAL INSTRUMENT-THE COPOPHONE. A new, and in many respects a peculiarly original and interesting, musical instrument, has been brought to England by its inventor, M. de Furtado Coelho, and is likely suon to be submitted to the appreciation of the London public. Its appearance is quaint, and the manner in which musical sounds are obtained therefrom is still more curious. The "Copophone," as it is styled, consists of 32drinking glasses, of all kinds, tumblers, book and claret glasses, selected without regard to shape or kind, but in view of purity and accuracy of sound. All these glasses are set with the greatest care on a sounding-board; a round of gutta-percha is placed under each glass so as to isolate it from the wood, and likewise the screws which made the glasses fast to the board are garnished with felt. These precautious are taken with the view of prewhich can be obtained from the glasses by the player. On each side of the instrument executant to dip his fingers in during the hell. M. de Furtado-Coelho, who plays on M. the "Copophone" which he has invented, obtains each note by turning a wet finger Sw pation and idle pleasures, and his moral tone selves at the foot of a precipice, we descended with more or less rapidity around the edge of Syl gradually became lower and lower. Thus, again to the loch, and plouded our way all each glass; thus he can increase and prolong Th when he was brought in contact with Brown, along its western markin, then up the dark the note at pleasure, and give it almost every shade of expression. In power of expression able to sympathize with any of Brown's trains Sligathan, and so on all the way by that the notes of the 'Copophono' bear much resemblance to those of the violin; as also in him. Intimacy under these circumstances was coming slightly chilly up the glon, and the latter instrument, double notes can be obtained, and, in the hands of the inventor and executant, every description of rapid and difficult execution seems to be within the scope of the "Copophone." This, of course, is not the first instrument that has been hitherto inverted in which glasses are used as a medium of sound; but none are to be compared to the present one. being, in fact, rather curiosities than real musical instruments. The inventor of the "Copophone" seems to think that it could become an important instrument, not only in the concert-room but also in the orchestra, and his claim certainly appears worthy of the consideration of compotent judges. M. de Furtido-Coelho's greatest difficulty in con-

of the glasses are however, beautiful, and
